

“See What’s Brewing This Fall... in New Hampshire!”

We’ve got the in-cider scoop on the best breweries and cideries to visit in New Hampshire this fall! Whether you’re a craft beer fanatic or just looking to enjoy a cool drink this season, explore some of the state’s best brews this autumn from Nashua to Lebanon!

North Country Hard Cider

Named one of USA Today’s 10 Best Cideries, North Country Hard Cider in Rollinsford has been serving all natural, hand-crafted cider since 2012. Dedicated to creating a preservative-free drink with the perfect balance of sweet and tart, a trio of friends got to work and created a wide variety of ciders for every customer to enjoy. Guests can stop by this prime location and enjoy a flight on the patio or even grab a pack to bring home to the family!

Farnum Hill Ciders

Fall is in the air at this mom-and-pop cidery and orchard in Lebanon, which has been growing apples and serving the public since 1965! Farnum Hill’s uniquely crafted ciders offer a dry, aromatic, and complex taste, perfect for pairing with a meal of any caliber. Those looking for a non-sweet sip are in the right place, as Farnum Hill specializes in dry, flavorful crafts. Visitors can spend some time outside the tap room, walking or taking a tractor-drawn wagon ride through Cidery’s orchard, Poverty Lane Orchard before finishing off their drink of choice.

Chase Hill Cider

Farming the Chase Hill slopes since the 1890s, Chase Hill Cider presents its customers with a glass of age-old cider and family history! Blending over 18 estate grown apple varieties to create their signature taste, The Chase family handles every aspect of the cider making process on-site at their family farm, serving up their delicious, one-of-a-kind Orchard Blend Hard Cider to customers. Boasting a cold glass of hand crafted, unfiltered cider, there’s no better way to kick back and enjoy the fall season.

Butternut Farm Cider House

Orch-ard glad you stopped by Butternut Farm Cider House for a drink! On-site production is no joke at this Farmington location, where production occurs beneath guests’ feet in the house basement! Offering a range of dry to sweet ciders, every customer will find their perfect match at Butternut Farm. Designed to make and sell small batch craft hard cider directly to the public, this cidery has it all. Not to mention, apple and pumpkin picking out back provides the perfect way to top off a day at the farm.

Canterbury Aleworks

Are we in New England, or England?! This Canterbury pub prides itself in being a “wood fired British and Irish inspired nano-brewery” and even has the flags and infamous telephone box out front to prove it! A cozy indoor atmosphere accompanied by 16 handcrafted beers on tap, an afternoon at Canterbury Aleworks will have you entering in the fall and leaving in the spring!

Millyard Brewery

This cozy joint can be found in the 200-year-old Nashua textile mills, complete with everything you can dream of, including a variety of on-tap brews, a lengthy menu featuring comfort food like Jamaican Beef Patties and Chicken Curry Pie...even free popcorn makes the list! Millyard boasts the “best live music” in town. Along with frequent trivia nights and comedy shows, this nano-brewery is about to make the list for your Saturday night go-to spot.

Woodstock Inn Brewery

Mountain views, stone fireplace, and craft beer? What else do you need! Woodstock Inn has been making beer for over 20 years, offering guests a long list of beers to choose from along with their delicious meals and mountain cabin charm. Whether you’re in the Tap Room, the Brew Pub, or out on the Patio, guests can enjoy a quintessential New Hampshire experience among the White Mountains this fall at Woodstock Inn.
